Council Report That Stray Cattle By-law Now Operative; Matter of Natural Gas Supply Being Taken Up; Cemetery Is Now Being Freed From Weeds, &c; Councillor Lissimore Appointed Deputy-Mayor

The following are the minutes of the Council of a restaurant license in when there was a full Council present

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and passed

A letter was read from Mr A. E Warren, general manager of Western region C.N.R., re their proposed use of natural gas here, advising the Council that as soon as all details in connection therewith are assembled the matter will be further dealt with.

An application was received from Mr A. C. Woodward for the purchase of lots 32 and 33 in block 11, 6445v at a price of $25.00 each and the 1924 taxes, stating that if offer is accepted building operations will proceed forth with.

Welch-Cork—That the Council reserve the right to offer concessoins to purchasers of town lots still listed, providing building operations are proceeded with at once, and that the application for the purchase of lots 32 and 33 block 11 be accepted—Carried

A communication was received from Mr F. Conroy, asking the approval by the Council o a restaurant license in premises of the Wainwright hotel.

Cork-Welch — That the application be granted, and that the necessary form of resolution be signed by Mayor and Secretary for the approval of same—Carried

The Committee on Health, Parks and Cemetery reported that satisfactory arrangements have now been made whereby the cemetery grounds and walks will be cleaned up and freed from weeds and undergrowth and the fences repaired where now broken

Forster-Fraser—That the report of the Health, Parks and Cemetery committee be accepted—Carried

The Bylaws Committee reported that Bylaw 146 which was passed on August 7th has now awaited the necessary legal fifteen days, and is now operative and in full force, and also that every citizen should be advised to take advantage of this bylaw and thus do away with the annoyance being caused by stray animals in town—

Forster-Lissimore—That the report of the Bylaw Committee be accepted Carried

The matter of a hospital for Wainwright having been brought before the Council, it was moved

Forster-Huntingford — That where as it has been stated on information secured from reliable sources, that it is possible to secure a fully-equipped hospital provided that the town grant certain concessions in regard to the site, exemption from taxation, lighting, and other details; be it therefore resolved that the Secretary in conjunction with the Mayor secure the necessary information in regard to the concessions required, also the capacity of the proposed building; cost thereof and other details they may deem necessary, and report thereon at the first next regular meeting o fthe Council—Carried

After the appointment of Councillor Lissimore as deputy-mayor for the next three months, the Council adjourned

GEOLOGIST MAKES SURVEY WAINWRIGHT AREA FOR MUTUAL OIL

That Wainwright's oil field is undoubtedly one of great potential value is the opinion of Charles C. Coulter well known geologist and engineer who arrived in Edmonton on Monday The present activity is just the beginning of the opening up of what will become a big industry in this province he says.

With an exceptionally fine oil structure, Alberta's development of this resource will eclipse anything in the last twelve or fifteen years Claims Mr Coulter

"It is hard to get people here to realize the great importance of the resources they possess," says Mr Coulter. "Even Canadian people on the whole fail to appreciate the vast resources of Alberta. It is too bad that people prefer to speculate in real estate in California instead of showing more faith in resources they have here

DR. C. C. COULTER AFTER INSPECTING IS FULLY SATISFIED

That oil has been discovered in good commercial quanities and quality in the vicinity of Wainwright, cannot at this time be a matter of doubt or question." So said Dr Charles C. Culter who is covering the Wainwright field for certain large interests whose identity he preferred to keep secret in an interiew on Saturday.

"The present status of the oil situation," declared Dr Couler, "reveals a great deal of intense interest from both a productive as well as a geologic viewpoint That the high quality of the fully established and that the lubricant content of the whole is very high re-within my province to become too optimistic in the case of any discovery, but it seems to me that interely too much publicity has heretofore been given those whose interests are well known to bitterly oppose the entrance into a new field of new capital and fresh effort."

"After a brief reconnasance survey the the field as a whole from Fabyan to Heath and from Township 43 to 46 a careful study and correlation of the logs of five wells within the area what topographic and structural study was possible within the time expended thereon as also a constant view of the splendid economic conditions apparent I am very strongly impressed with the fact that the whole area will be a vast oil producer. You have quantity here; the quality will take care of itself The pressure seems to be well balanced and sufficiently sustained by gas water and rock agencies and it is my best judgment that is derived from an unusually prolific source. This fact as coantichinal terrace structure gives instant support to the genuineness of the belief that within this area will by found oil in enormous quantity."

"After a further detailed study of the field,' Dr. Coulter stated 'I should not object to making a public—a rather technical treastise dealing with the existing conditions found in the Wainwright field from both a practical as well as scientific viewpoint."

I.O.O.F. HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC AT MOTT LAKE

Although the day was showery on Wednesday last, those who braved the elements for the journey to Mott lake for the annual picnic of the I.O O. F. lodges in town were well repaid despite the fact that the numbers were somewhat sparse,

During the afternoon several sport's events were run off under the direction of Bros. Dunsmore and Fraser the while the ladies, ably assisted by Bro. Davy Davison prepared a truly repast, and all agreed that the event had proved enjoyable.

The following were the prize winners:—

Girls under 8—M Carsell, 1; A. Carsell, 2.

Girls undr 12—A, Carsell, 1; B. Bowerman, 2.

Boys under 12—A. Alderman, 1; C Gordon, 2.

Girls under 16—B. McKay, 1; A Wiley, 2

Boys under 16—A. Spence, 1; L Milner, 2

Ladies race—Mrs F. McLeod, 1; B McKay, 2.

Men's 100 yds—D. O'Donnell, 1; O Bowen, 2.

Mixed relay race—Mrs F. McLeod's team, 1.

In the horse shoe tournament in which a number of teams competed the prizes went to J. Sutherland, 1: H. Richardson, 2; D. Davison, 3.

HON. C. MITCHELL OUTLINES DEFECTS IN GREENFIELD GOV'T

Although the theatre was not crowded on Thursday last when the meeting in the Liberal interests was held, a nice crowd listened with attention to the speaker of the evening, Hon Chas. Mitchell.

Mayor Gerow was elected to the chair for the meeting, and in a few well chosen remarks introduced Mr Mitchell, who soon warmed up to his subject of the business of the government of Alberta

He pointed out to his hearers that the era of the U.F.A. government in 1921 was a new thing in governments and it was elected wholly and solely upon its state to rectify all the errors of the old line political parties He showed that the U.F.A. although formed as an econimic organisation had broken beyond those bounds in 1920 because their leaders were seeking government powers. He believed in the ethics, of the U.F.A. as originally laid down, but he did not consider it the proper function of any such, body or group to have the sole controlling power, for the reason that it was impossible for the serving the best interests of all creeds and shades of opinion to be governed by one organisation, which at best was founded alone on economic principles at its inception

Mr Mitchell showed how that Alberta held a predominating number of those of Liberal tendencies, just as Ontario was principally of Conservative feelings, and he felt that the great majority of those who had assisted in 1921 to make that change of government at Edmonton, were now seeking a restoration of a stable form of government, and naturally turned to the Liberal party. In attendance at a meeting at Hanna, he had observed that a great change had come over the minds of the farmers and members of the U.F.A who seemed to have lost feith in their own choice of the Green field administration, and even Mr H W. Wood their president who had always proved himself clever in talking in generalities when addressing such gatherings, had been unable to convince many there of the advisability of a continuance of the present government

Speaking with regard the old Liberal party, when as provincial treasurer he had been a member of the Cabinet the speaker said that the government then in power had given every assistance possible to the U.F.A. in information and requests, while now Mr Wood was turning derision against the new body of agriculturists which is being formed under the head of the United Farmers of Canada this no doubt being accounted for from the fact that it is for enconomic purposes only, and seems content to leave the matter of political powers where it rightfully belongs—the old line parties

With regard to the Wheat Pool, Mr Mitchell said that this was most greatly desired by the Liberal party when they were in power, although the big drive up on by the U.F.A. was possibly its true origin; it was therefore no credit to the Greenfield government at all, being more the outcome of the efforts of the economic side of the organisation which today is being sadly flouted.

Both from a racial as well as economic standpoint the U.F.A. political party in power was a mistake, for with the 43 members out of 61 seats they were strong enough to put through any piece of legislation they desired whether for the betterment of the province or otherwise. Up to the present af er three years trial the government had accomplished no legislation of major importance, and not obtained even a straight record of achievement in Alberta, for the Farm Loan Act which was practically all that had been brought down to fruition was a revised Bill of the Liberal party which had laid awaiting an opportune financial state of the times with a few simple alterations which had been necessitated by changes brought about in after-war periods.

In fact the Greenfield government had destroyed the most typical democratic legislation ever in force—the Direct Legislation Act—in the matter of their prohibition measure, and principles had been violated by the manner in which the result of the plebiscite had been handled

With regard to the U.F.A. 1921 cry of economy, and Mr Wood's promise to get partizanship banished, the speaker pointed out that the present administration were just as partizan as any government he had ever known had been and this was shown in the fact that all appointments to office by the Greenfield party had been given to U.F.A. men After three years of power, however, Albertans were being to realise that the government is not carrying out its specific promise of economy, nor even curtailing capital expenditure. Statements were being published in the interests of the U.F A. party which were grossly misleading, and these had only to be roughly analysed to drive sheer fantasics.

After dealing at great length with the way in which the financial status of the government had been altered so as to make a good showing, Mr Mitchell stated that if the Liberal party were again placed in power at the next election, so far as his party was concerned any organisation of farmers or others banded together for economic purposes would receive the greatest consideration within bounds from the party that had held office from 1905 to 1921, and that had been proven to have served the interests of all men of all creeds in every way to further the ends aimed at; and which had also been proven to be the party against which no one could point to any malfeasance.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mr Mitchell was accorded a hearty vote of thanks, after which a number of those present resolved themselves into an organisation meeting a report of appears elsewhere.

WEDDING BELLS

McLEAN—SPITTER

A very pretty wedding took place on August 14th at St Thomas' church, when Miss Rhoda, second daughter of Mr and Mrs H. Spitter of Glastonbury, England, became the bride of Mr Robert McLean, of Gilt Edge the ceremony being performed by the Rev A. Love.

The bride, who was charmingly dressed in a brown crepe de chene costume with hat and shoes to match and carrying a bridal bouquet, was attended by Miss Mabel Harris as briedsmaid, while, Mr M. McLear brother of the groom acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy party repaired to their home at Gilt Edge where a dainty supper was served by Mesdames Balmer, O'Connor and Whithelm, after which a very pleasant time was spent in music and dancing in the flower-bedecked rooms until a late hour, the bridal couple being the recepients of very many happy wishes and handsome presents to celebrate the occasion

CURRIE—PARKER

On Wednesday Aug. 20th at the Methodist Parsonage the marriage of Mr David Hunter Currie of Irma to Miss Sarah Waddel Parker, of Ardrossan was solemnized by the Rev G. G. Pybus. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs P. D. Laird and Mrs Pybus. Best wishes for a long and prosperous life are extended to the happy couple

THREE SUSTAIN INJURIES WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

Last week, while Mr J. Denoncourt jr. was driving a Ford car containing several others, a bolt fell from the front spring or axle with the result that the car ran into the side of the road and overturned. It is not known at what speed the car was travelling but the smash was so bad as to cause severe injuries to Mr H. Loggeruist who sustained a very badly fractured arm, Mrs T. Reilly whose wrists were broken and Mr Denoncourt, sr. Assistance was phoned for from town and Dr Middlemass made a hurried cal' to the scene of the accident After rendering all assistance possible the patients were brought to town, while Mr Loggerquist was sent immediately to a hospital in Edmonton, it is being found that both bones in his arm were broken in three places. The driver of the car escaped practically unhurt, but the other riders were all more or less badly bruised and shaken up.

FIRE BREAKS OUT AT WAINWRIGHT HOTEL

At the height of the young gale which sprang up huriedly on Monday afternoon, an alarm of fire was rung or an outbreak at the Wainwright hotel. Within a very few moments practically the whole town was out to lend assistance if it proved to be needed. The fire laddies, however soon had the two chemical machines at work, and although the big motor pumping engine was all in readiness just as quickly it was found that this was not required, the brigade having all safe within about fifteen minutes It was certainly a providential escape for if the fire had made headway with the terrific wind blowing at the time, there is no telling where it might have ended up. However, all's well that ends well.

WAIN. CONSTITUENCY LIBERAL ASSOCIATION NOW RE-ORGANIZED

At the close of the Liberal meeting held on Thursday evening last, a nice number of those present stayed for the organisation meeting which had been announced, and the election of the new officers took place.

Messrs MacKenzie and Huntingford, having been appointed as pro tem chairman and secretary respectively, the meeting was thrown open for nominations for the office of preident of the, Wainwright constituency Liberal association,

Mr J. MacKenzie, of Chauvin, was the only nominee, he being put forward by Dr H C. Wallace and although that gentleman, expressed himself as wishing to withdraw on account of lack of time and other duties he was declared unanimously elected to the position.

The full list of officers appointed was:—

President:—Mr J. Mackenzie Chauvin

1st Vice-pres:—Mr S. R. Bowerman Wainwright

Sec.-Treas:—Mr W. J. Huntingford Wainwright,

Executive Committee,— Mrs. S. Bowarman, Wainwright and Mrs L. E. Roy, Chauvin, with Messrs L. F. Byrens, Edgerton L. E. Roy, Chauvin L. L. Pound, Ribstone H. J. Messier, Heath J. L. Gerow, Wainwright H Reeves, Wainwright and W. Adams, Fabyan.

The following motion was moved by Messrs Fieldhouse-Huntingford:—That the executive committee consist of the above ladies and gentlemen, together with such others as are appointed by local organisations to be later formed at additional centers who shall each appoint one member to the said executive committe.—Carried.

A motion was regularly put and carried whereby the fee for membership in the association was set at one dollar, and after some purely routine business and a hearty vote of thanks to Hon. Chas. Mitchell for his attendance and interest the meeting adjourned.

PRINCE OF WALES PROBABLY WILL MAKE BRIEF STAY HERE

CALGARY, — That His Royal Highness, Edward Prince of Wales heir apparent to the throne of Great Britian, is likely to pass through Edmonton while he is in Alberta, was indicated here late tonight by Prof. W L. Carlyle, manager of "E.P." Ranch Ranch at Pekisiko, Alta. No confirmation is available at present, but further information is expected in the near future, it was indicated

It has been indicated that the Prince might take a visit to Jasper National Park at Jasper, Alta., 200 miles north and west of Edmonton. His Royal Highness is travelling on the Canadian National Railways while he is in Canada and as Jasper is owned and operated by the National Lines, it is asserted that an invitation to make the trip has been eytended to Alberta's Royal Rancher. A trip to his northern scenic beauty spot, one of the most beautiful and famous on the continent would necessiate a passage through Edmonton, and it is quite probable that his train would make a brief stop in th e Capital City. It is known that Lord Renfrew, using this incognito and desiring strict observance of it, will visit Banff Alta, and it is thought also that he will take in Alberta's other famous National Park.

NEW LAW REQUIRES APPEARANE BEFORE CONSUL

Under the new 1924 immigration law, it is understood that anyone going into the United States from this province must appear in person before the United States counsul at Calgary and obtain credentials and passports from him.

Various boards of trade, have made application to the secretary of state for the American government to have a consul appointed at Edmonton. It is felt that this would be a great convenience for people living in this sector of the province as under the present arrangement a trip has to be made to Calgary re gardless of what other place the person may be leaving from

Brit. Pet. No. 4 Is Now Producer

Joy regins once more in the hearts of the optimists of the Wainwright oilfield, while envy, hatred, malice and the thousand-and-one other things the pessimists is heir to, is surely the portion today of the doubting Thomases The reason is not far to seek, either for it has now been broadcasted far and wide that the No. 4 well of the British Petroleums Ltd. has been declared by its eminent geologist and superintendent Mr Newton W. Emmens, to be one more actual oil producer belonging to that company in this new field.

The statement as made by him on Saturday last, and he was most emphatic in the statement that oil has again been found as the result of the company's work although of course he could not make any estimate as to quantity or quality.

Suffice it to say, that the oil is there and subsequent work at the hole will eventually demonstrate the value of the find to the company and the public at large. In engineering circles it is the concensus of opinion that this will demonstrate finally and for all time that the Wainwright district has a large and productive oilfield, and should have the effect of quieting effectively certain interested parties who have lost no opportunity since the inception of the work of belittling the company's efforts to prove that their contention that the Wainwright oilfield will possibly prove tte largest field of crude oil and natural gas on the American continent.

Tht oil was struck on Saturday last in the same sands which proved the No. 2 well a producer, and this is the fourth occasion in which the company's rigs have encountered the oil-bearing strata—and this over an area of only roughly one and a-half miles in extent.

MAPLE LEAF NOW CASING NO. 1 WELL

After a tedious wait of nearly two weeks during which time the crew were hard put to it at times to retain the mud in the hole on account of the tremendous gas flow, the Maple Leaf Company's casing and such-like material arrived here at the week nd This is now being steadily screwed-up and dropped to position so as to shut off any intervening water bearing strate and conserve the gas sands and as soon as the bottom of the deep hole is reached the casing will be set with something over 200 bags of special oil-well cement.

As soon as this cement is hardened the big drill will go down and drill out the plug left in the casing, and then—"Oh, boy, here's another big oil well;" At least, that is the confident expectation of Superintendent Beresford; and to show that his hopes are well founded, it is only necessary to state that exactly the same sands and other stratt as was encountered in the Fabyan No. 1 well (a known producer) have been brought to light by the careful coring which Drilled Credille has been steadily pursuing for the last 200 feet of the hole

It should therefore only be a matter of a week or ten days before, the Maple Leaf Company, and with them the public at large will be rejoicing in the bringing in of still another well in this vast field of 'liquid gold" There No 2 well has been spotted within half-a-mile of the present site, and the erection of the derrick will proceed forthwith while timbers and machinery for still another similar undertaking has been ordered and is in fact partially shipped

Mr R. E. Williams, the General manager of the Maple Leaf Co arrived in town on Tuesday, and purposes staying closely to the work at their well until the casing which is now being placed is in place and a test made of the quantity of oil obtainable.

CROWN OIL CO. WILL BRING IN TWO RIGS

That the Crown Oil Company one of the companies with which he is associated, will commence drilling two new wells in the Wainwright oil field within the next thirty days, is the statement made by Mr A B Palmer, of the Palmer Construction Company, of Vancouver, Mr Palmer together with his associates, control large acreage in the Wainwright field The company have secured large holdings in township 47, ranges 6, 7 and 8 in the Buffalo Coulee district, as well as a block of about 10 sections south of Baxter Lake. The exact location of their drilling sites has not been determined but a geologist will be in the field next week to pick the spots for their first opperations.

ing winter, arrangements now being made for the shipment of necessary large timbers from British Columbia.

Mr Palmer is much impressed by the progress and success of the British Petroleums wells, and gave as his opinion that their number three well would be a 1500 barrel producer and certainly not less than 1000 barrels

The greatest advertisement for the field would be secured if the Canadian National lines commence using oil for fuel thought Mr Palmer. He believed the construction of a pipe line in the field but a matter of a short time and the actual marketing of Wainwright oil a large possibility this year. Mr Palmer gave credit to a rumor that large oil interests in the old country were contemplating the taking over of one of the largest holding companies now in the Wainwright field He believed that every assistance and encouragement should be given the smaller companies in order to assure the rapid opening up and development of the district.

Mr Palmer will return to Edmonton in two weeks' time before coming to Wainwright to superise his company's operations in the field.

STILL MORE COMPANIES COMING INTO FIELD

In addition to the five drilling rigs actually in operation in the Wainwright-Fabyan field at the present time, it is now known that at least another five will be at work within the next month. Two will be operated by the Crown Oil Company, the Brittannia Oil Company, organized by Mr Aykroyd will drill on the leases held by him, and the Phoenix Oil Company will also be in the field. This latter company was organized by Colocl G. B. McLeod.

Another company has been definitely organized, in the city, while several more are in precess of formation

GENERAL OIL CO

In our round of the oilfield we are informed that the activities of the General Oil company have been held up pending the completion of re-construction by means of a Dominion charter. In the meantime quite an additional acreage has been secured consisting of some eleven hundred acres and this will be the means of making the new company quite an attractive issue.

We understand that the old shareholders will participate share for share in the new deal and that with larger acreage and a Dominion charter, the holders of general stock should be feeling quite elated.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. CHAS LOVE

Mrs Chas. Love, who is leaving town this week to take up residence in Edmonton, and who has for many years been a faithful worker on behalf of the Sunday school of Grace church was the recepient of a beautiful keepsake last week from the scholars and teachers of that institution, this taking the form of a very handsome bible. Mrs Love in expressing her thanks for the gift spoke of love she held for the work, and told how the presentation would always be a cherished possession on account of the happy memories it will revive.

DR. J. A. ALLAN DISCUSSES STRIKE AT B. P. NO. 3 WELL

In the opinion of Dr J. A. Allan, head of the department of geology at the University of Alberta, the showing made by British Petroleums No. 3, is not surprising in view of its proximity to well No. 1 of the same company. "This strike," says Dr Allan, "is further proof of the fact that there are oil bearing beds in the part of the province and that considerable oil will undoubtedly be produced of the main supply has been tapped. I would like to see the size of the field of operations enlarged to include a good deal of the territory northwest of the present drilling site in the direction of Birch Lake

In Dr. Allan's opinion, quantities of the lighter oils may quite probably be found to exist somewhere between the present Wainwright field and the source of the gas supply which has been tapped at 'Tofield' out. At one of these concerts, Mayor Blatchford was chairman, and at the conclusion he congratulated me, and informed me that it was the best concert he had ever seen put on in Edmonton. We have some good shows for the people of this district, and my last words are "Look out for the beginning."

Copy of a letter sent by the Schottish Harvester to a gentleman in Edmonton

Ribstone, 7-7 24.

My Dear—

We arrived safely in this mirage in the desert. The inhabitants of this place are as follows:

30,000,000 gophers.
2,000,000 badgers.
1,000,000 coyotes.
1,000,000,000,000 flies and mosquitoes.
17 uatives.

Campbell and his two pals.

However, we are having a great time. We spend most of our hours in big game hunting. Yesterday we killed two bed-bugs and trapped some 50,000 flies, the latter by means of fly-paper. Gosh, bit it is exciting.

I hope everything is right at Court, and that the people are now able to sleep in peace and contentment since the departure of the wild Scots. As I write this letter my pen is keeping time to the music of nature. There is a blue-bottle chasing a fly just above my head, and they are both shouting their war song, while my pals are chasing a whiskey bottle which has been empty for many years, but which still retains a sensation of its ouce glorious aroma.

Do not forget us when it comes to the opening of your works down south. When you sound the "fall in," we shall be there with our arms, if by such times we are not prairie skeletons, the victims of horse-flies and mosquitoes. Nevertheless, we are fighting a good fight and God is with us.

Write soon to your old friends

George, Dick, and
Thomas W. Campblle.

Already the heat of summer has passed, the days are drawing in, and evenings becoming shorter; and in a short time the children will be returning to school after their long summer vacation.

Already some of the children are finling time irksome, they are restless and to some measure dis-satisfied. This is really a desire to be doing something useful and to resume their lessons—though, of course, the children do not recognize this fact, and would for the most part disclaim it.

As soon as the start has been made the children will enjoy their school work and for a few weeks attack their task with vigor. After this period a falling away in the standard of the work of some of the pupils is to be observed, and every effort or the teacher mets with little response from the pupil. The pupil becomes listless and seems to be unable to or unwilling to apply him or herself to the task, which has now become so distasteful.

This lassitude is far too common in our local schools. It is not the fault of the teachers, but on the other hand is one of the greatest obstacles to the success of their labors with which they have to contend. It is not, in this district, the result of underfeeding nor insufficient clothin. It is, too often, the direct result of parents not insisting that their children get enough of that cheapest of all nature's provisions, viz., sleep.

The curfew bell does not ring in Chauvin, nor in the surrounding district. We were greatly amused recently when telling one Chauvin child of the ourfew bell that rang at Lloydminster. Unity and other places, calling children in from off the streets at nine o'clock each evening. The child was frankly disbelieving, and although our statement was corroborated by another person, the child does not seem to believe that statement is true.

This frank disbelief on the part of the child may be regarded as indicative that little parental care is exercised in the matter of insisting that the child has sufficient sleep to provide for its rapid growth and for the necessary vigor to apply to school tasks The child must have sleep—if not in her it will be sleepy in school.

We do not advocate that Chauvin should ring the curfew bell each evening at nine o'clock, nor that a constable should be sent round each night to chase the laggards home. This would not be sufficient since it could not serve the rural schools, to which our present remarks apply with equal force. But we do urge, and urge strongly, that all parents co-operate more fully with te school teachers by ascertaining what progress their children make in school and by seeing that their children have each sufficient sleep to enable them to go to school vigorous and fresh the next morning.

THE MYSTERY OF THE FOREST

Herriard tightened his lips grimly as the uneven, water-logged road began to take it out of the car he was driving through the forest. The gale that had sprung up as darkness fell was making fine sport with trees too old to accept any challenge to combat, and now the swerving rays from the presently received the worst scare of branch lying across the miry track.

With a fine respect for his own neck and besides, the car was his mother's—the young man dropped the speed to a galling ten miles per hour, in spite of which contemptible pace he presently received the worst scart of a lifetime.

A vague something took shape right in front of the car—a leafy branch was it, or one of those tiny forest ponies? The sudden demand upon his presence of mind left him no time for speculation, and even when the barker had given their panicky screech and the car was silent and still, he had to look twice before his eyes made out a bundle of dark, fluttering garments the half-crouching form of a woman a white face peering up appealing into his.

"Pardin?" said Herriard, for he thought she was speaking.

The woman looked old; he saw a wisp of white hair blowing about her thin face as she stepped nearer.

"You—you have a car?" she faltered.

He looked round at it—the superb limousine track completely. The car was big enough to speak for itself, and he felt rather hurt that she had failed to see it a moment sooner. The scare had not improved his temper, already sorely tried by twenty miles of stern fighting through the gale.

"I have a daughter—she is but a child," resumed the woman, and a white, shapely hand made a pathetic gesture that seemed in keeping with the rather foreign accent.

Herriard bent forward in his seat. "I don't quite understand," he said in his downright way, "but if there is anything I can do you know—"

"That depends," came the answer, "on your generosity—and courage." The woman had been scrutinizing him closely, her deep, dark eyes still full of a certain doubt. But presently, while he was still wondering what part she would have in this world of stormridden darkness—how she came to be there, in the wildest part of the great forest, risking her life itself to hold up a benighted motorist—her confidence in hime was established.

She turned and lifted her arm gracefully to point down a bracken-bordered wagon track.

"It is possible to run your car along there—to the place where my daughter is," she said.

"If you will be so generous—" Her voice checked on a sudden gasp of anguish

"Ford God's sake, sir," she Entreated, "give me your help to-night!"

There was no mistaking the sincerity of her appeal. It put the question of clever acting on one side banished in a moment the suspicion Herriard had felt that perhaps this was a trap for the unwary. He got down from the car, peered along the wagon-track, and saw the lighted windows of a prosaic, respectable-looking bungalow.

"Very well" he said, and offered his hand to help her into the car.

The woman responded with all the grace of a past century, so that Herriard found himself thinking curiously of strap-slung coaches whilst he steered the murmuring limousine towards the corrugated iron building.

With the same courtly manner his passenger alighted at the hideously plain door; behind which a big dog now set up his savage barking. Two raps on the wooden panels, a pause, and then another rap, and instantly the uproar ceased.

The door opened, and Herriard, approaching at a sign from the woman doffed his cap as he met the timid glances of the one and only girl who had ever stirred his heart like this. It was pretty awful, he thought, to let a pair of brown eyes work such mischief in a single moment but there was no resisting spell. Beauty in distress! It was the old eternal appeal working the old, eternal miracle in the thausandsth part of a second.

This is the gentleman who has come to our assistance," said the white-haired lady, and there was an exchange of grave bows. "If you will go inside sir, I will lose no time in describing how you can help us in our great extremity

"But, mother," demurred the girl, "this gentleman may object—"

"My time is entirely at your service Herriard hastened to declare.

The girl looked at him steadily for a long moment, her hands nervously toying with the brown scarf which was draped about her shoulders.

"Time is not the only consideration she said. I am thinking of the perill My mother, she means well, but this is asking too great a sacrifice—and of an entire stranger!"

"The gentleman has the courage of all his fellow countrymen," interposed the whitehaired lady with an air of finality. "Come we will go inside."

A hanging oil lamp, itself an offence to sight and smell, was shedding a sickly light upon the matchboarded walls, tawdry pictures, cheap furniture, faded carpets. One glance around in fact, was sufficient to warrant the conclusion that the bungalow had been rented ready-furnished, and that only the desperate need of a secluded retreat had reconcilled its tenants to the interior. Even the dog sniffed disdainfully as he went back to the corner he had made his own.

"Now, madam," broke out Herriard as they all three looked at one another after the door had been bolted, "If I am to be of any service, the sooner he better perhaps?"

"You are right," said the mother, throwing off the black cloak, which had been fluttering about her in the wind outside. "There is such need for instant action that I must ask you to let me dispense with explanations."

"You mean you have no wish to explain?"

"We—my daughter and I—alas! we can only ask you to trust us," sighed the woman; but her daugghter gave a quick gesture of dissent.

"Mother, it is impossible—"

"Quite impossible that I could fail to trust either of you," broke in the young man with reckless chivalry, for which he was rewarded by a half-pity ing, half-admiring glance. "Where does my help come in?"

At that instant the bolted door suddenly rattled as if strong hands outside were trying to burst it open. The woman faced about to look at it with eyes full of horror, but her daughter only smiled.

"It is the wind, mother. It came against the door like that whilst I was here alone just now. You, sir," she added, with a certain queenly graciousness that might have seemed quaint, only it was so perfectly natural, and to Herriard so perfectly delicious, "you were bold to attempt the journey through the forest to-night. I was quite sure my mother would wait in vain for help.

"It was a bit fun, nothing more," he smiled. "All the same, I should not have cared to have anybody sharing it. At this moment I would be reluctant to offer you anything like a joy-ride!"

It was the mother's turn to smile. "Ah, I have heard the word—I understand," she said. "But—" The smile passed before returning agitation she wrung her hands. "It is what you are asked to do sir—to drive my daughter through the forest to some place of safety, anywhere from here! My child's life, yes, her life itself may depand upon your help. If you knew! But you have said you trust us. And you are ready, is it not so?—ready to drive her in your car alone—"

He was staring now in amazement.

"Why yes" he agreed reluctantly "If the young lady can trust me in return." And he looked at her as she stood with hanging head, biting a lip in perplexity. From neck to temples she seemed to be burning red with sudden shame, and yet, strangely enough, there was no embarrassment in her speech.

"As to my trust in you," she said you need have no uneasiness I think you are very kind and I would like to thank you now."

Before the journey has commenced? There was a moment's pause the swift passing of look between mother and daughter, before any answer came.

"You will get no thanks at the journey's end," said th girl very quietly; and with the words she laid her and in his, and her slender figure seemed to sway towards him, so that he felt the warmth of her young life, the fragrance of her glossy hair. Then with an air of resignation, she withdrew the hand and turned away, leaving him to puzzle over her last strange utterance. "No thanks at the journeys end." Now what in Heaven's name did that portend?

But matters had gone to far for second and wiser impluses to prevail, and already the mother begun to act with such speed as the emergency—whatever it was demanded. She gave him to understand that nothing need delay the start, unless he had a fancy for a

Make your hair beautiful
with this shampoo

You know women whose hair is always beautiful — no matter how plainly arranged. Think for a moment and you will agree that this beauty lies altogether in softness, the healthy gleam of natural color.

That is something every girl and woman can have. By simple care in shampooing. This way recommended by authorities.

Now you can test it at our expense.

Use an olive oil shampoo. It never leaves hair dull, brittle, dead-looking.

Because it cleans mildly, yet thoroughly, each hair, down to the tiny scalp pores. Leaves scalp and hair healthily clean.

All the lovely natural lights and glints of color are brought out. Your hair is silken soft, pliant, with that lovely sheen.

Use olive oil in its dainty, modern form for the hair—as blended in Palmolive Shampoo. Not the least bit oily. And it has the additional advantage of economy.

Get free 15c trial bottle. Simply send coupon.

And see how delightfully the first shampoo improves your hair.

Here and There

A rich strike of silver lead ore has been made on Galena Hill, Yukon Territory. One vein is eighteen feet in width and shows 70 per cent lead with 30 to 50 ounces of silver. Several big mining interests are reported as active in this area.

The manufacture of wooden boxes is an important industry in British Columbia. There are 25 box-making plants in the province, representing a capital of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, about 1,200 employees and an annual payroll of not less than $1,250,000.

So popular has the bungalow camp system established by the Canadian Pacific Railway become that it will be necessary to extend it greatly. This statement was made recently by C. B. Foster, Passenger Traffic Manager, after a visit to the hotels and camps in the Rockies.

That the farmers of Western Canada are now giving increasing attention to the improvement of their home surroundings is shown by the fact that they have not only planted 5,250,000 trees distributed by two government forestry stations this year but have also purchased large quantities from private nurseries.

Summer fishing commenced on Lesser Slave Lake on July 28th and will close September 30th. Operators have been limited to a catch of 1,500,000 pounds of whitefish but no limit has been placed on pickerel and jack fish, as the market for these varieties is restricted. Four fish companies are operating this summer and will ship to Chicago via Dominion Express.

Imports of Canadian produce and manufacture into Australia received during the year ended June 30th, 1924, amounted in value to £5,064,253, an expansion of £1,899,803 over the previous year. It is the largest volume of trade yet recorded between Canada and Australia. The greatest increase was in motor chassis though a good volume of trade was also done in rubber goods, boots and shoes.

What is claimed to be a world's record for relaying rails was established by a crew of men on the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the New Brunswick district recently. In two days the 220 men in the gang tore up 29.7 miles of old 85-lb. rails and replaced them with new. All available data states that the former Canadian record was 11.7 miles, which exceeds that established in the United States.

The "Empress of Scotland," one of the Canadian Pacific Railway's finest liners, docked at Quebec on August 8th with a passenger list crowded with important names. Among them were Lord Beaverbrook, the Canadian financier, Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, whose offer of a fifty thousand dollar prize for the best plan tending to maintain world peace created so much interest recently, and E. W. Beatty, K.C., Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Beatty had just concluded a most successful tour of Europe with the object of attracting capital and immigrants to Canada. He spoke with great enthusiasm of the prospects of obtaining both and especially anticipated an influx of fine new Canadians from Denmark.

NO NEED FOR BLUE RUIN TALK

While it would be foolish to minimize conditions which have arisen in regard to the crops, it would be the height of folly to give any diligent heed to what is spread around by the alarmists. When it is said that the reports that come forth from Chicago in respect to the crops are sent out for purely political purposes we can take this to be true, and accordingly discount all the talk of blue ruin when it comes to the crops which Western Canada will produce. Miss Cora Hind of the Manitoba Free Press hit the nail on the head when she said that no one, no matter how expert he may be, for how far he may travel, can tell for a moment, at least even approximately, what the crops will be in any one of the three prairie provinces. This was the conclusion she arrived at after an extensive tour of inspection throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.

Miss Hind is a practical woman, conservative in her estimate of crops and, when she says that she believes that even in the very driest areas wheat put in on well-prepared summer fallow will yield a paying return while in certain sections where there has been a reasonable amount of rain good percentage of the summerfallowed crops will yield as heavily as they did last year, she considerably discounts uncalled for pessimism

SCHOOL MATTERS

With all the results of the midsummer departmental examinations now at hand, it becomes evident that this is the time for everyone concerned to take serious thought as to the past condition of our school. Every individual, pupils, teachers, parents, guardians alike should consider how far he or she has been responsible for these conditions

Now, it is customary to pass the blame in matters of this kind alonge to the teaching staff Possibly there some lack of co-operation in the teaching staff during the past year and this made itself felt to some extent But the teachers, without exception, worked hard, honestly and conscientiously and had they received the wholehearted support of the pupils and parents, the examination results might have been vastly different Some failures always occur, but there was absolutely no occasion for the wholesale slaughter of candidates which occured.

Pupils—with or without the knowledge and consent of their parents—consistently neglected their schoo' work, especially during the last term Their energies were dissipated in numerous forms of activities in which the school or its welfare formed no part. To be specific, we would point out plainly that not one high schoo' student should be seen at any public or semi-public dance during the term Yet, if our information is correct scarcely one dance was held at which some of these children were not present. How can they expect to make school progress when their energies are absorbed in social affairs, keeping them out of bed until unreasonable hours and at the same time rendering them unfit to take up mental work the next day. Against dancing, per se, we say we have no objection whatever; but against the incredible folly of pursuing dancing or any other form of social activities when engaged in the serious business of preparing for one's life duties, we register most emphatic objections. It simply cannot be done The two things will not mix. Either these pupils should concentrate their energies on their school work to the complete exclusion of other things; or they should quit school and make room for those who are willing to show their appreciation of the educational opportunities presented to them

Dancing is only one thing which could be mentioned. We do not know that it is the worst, but is serves as an instance to point the moral and adorn the tale.

Parents have an immense responsibility in this matter for it is beyond doubt that they have, in many cases aided and abeted their children in consistent neglect of school duties—not intentionally, of course, but the effect has been exactly the same. Today many of these parents are face to face with the results of their ownfoolishness. They see their children have wasted a year in school—and, naturally enough, they blame everybody except themselves. The Star is putting it straight up to them where a part at least, of the blame belongs.

On top of the negligence of pupils and the indifference of parents is imposed a number of organizations of various kinds, all excellent in their way but all equally detrimental to the school and detracting from its value to the pupils, to say nothing of he way in which these organizations attract to attention of boys and girls to the exclusion of their interest in the school. Generally speaking, these children do not need any uplifting half as badly as they can be depended upon to arrange most if not all, their activies. Why not leave them alone and let them do it?

This is the time to take stock and prevent, if possible, a recurrence of the fiasco of the past year. A new teaching staff takes charge on September 2nd Of the new ones and their exact capacities as teachers, no one here knows. They are engaged by the school board on excellent reports of their work in former years. The assumption is that they are all capable.

But no matter how capable they may be, their efforts are doomed to failure unless they receivq the earnest backing of pupils and parents. This high school of ours requires a 'school spirit," a spirit in which the good of the school is kept in mind, first, last and all the time. If parents, pupils teachers, all co-operate toward this end, then 1925 will see a wonderful change from 1924

JUST HUMAN

His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, should get out an injunction against the publication of a lot of foolish articles which have appeared recently regarding him. The slop artists particularly of the American breed bid fair to make our Prince look like an idiot, in the eyes of those who know nothing about him except what appears in slushy magazine and newspaper articles.

The Prince has had a lot of trouble with obstreperous horses during the past year. He is no wild west rider and has enjoyed many a dump from the hurricane deck of ramping steeds These misadventures created loud laughter among the writer boys, even though it is doubtful whether any one of them could ride a saw-horse.

The stuff about the horses is not so bad. It is a fair subject for a good joke. It is the junk written about him socially which is decidedly painful For instance, the other day a front page article appeared in the daily papers narrating a lot of stuff about the Prince as a dancer. It is portrayed him as a dancing fool, who sticks to it 24 hours per day, stopping only for meals and a brief rest once in a while Now, the Prince likes to dance; he likes pretty girls too; he wouldn't be his grandpa's grandson if he didn't But he is far from being a complete nut at it. It is unfair to him and puts him in entirely false light before the public to have articles of this nature published. And this is only one of many nauseating instances of newspapers and magazines publishing what they choose to call "intimate details" of the Prince's life

The truth is that the Prince of Wales while only human and just as fond of enjoyment as any of the rest of us, has a very strong sense of public duty and a clear realization of what is expected from one occupying his position. He is popular wherever he goes; a real ambassador of the Empire, but he is not the silly, empty-head ass the slush writers would indicate him to be in their articles

SIR HENRY THORNTON CANNOT MAKE STATEMENT

EDMONTON. — "I have not yet arrived at decision as to what measure of transportation relief will be recommended for the Peace River country declared Sir Henry Thornton, who arrived in Edmonton from the north, on Thursday afternoon. "I cannot say where the outlet will be made, whether by the Brule cut-out-by branch lines through the Wapta Pass or the Pine Pass. This is a question which will have to be decided at a conference of all parties interested."

Sir Henry met the city council shortly after his arrival to discuss the question of subways and a new terminal station. He assured the city that the C.N.R. was ready to proceed with construction as soon as the city accepted

REPORT OF BATTLE RIVER U.F.A. & U.F.W.A. CONVENTION

Mr R. A. Beck, the Secretary, has forwarded us the following report of the recent convention for publication

The Battle River U.F.A. & U.F.W.A. political association held its sixth annual convention at Wainwright on Aug. 12th and 13th, with fifty three delegates present.

The convention opened at 11 oclock the first day and after some routine business adjourned for lunch, A short musical programme was rendered after lunch and the convention then got down to business

The president, Mr A F. Aitken presented his address to the convention which was followed by an address by Mrs R. B. Gunn, president of the U F.W.A. The convention was also addressed during the afternoon by Mr H. E. Spencer M P. who gave a very interesting account of the work done during the past session at Ottawa.

Consideration of resolutions was interspersed throughout the proceedings of the two days session. Some of the more important resolutions dealt with were amendment of B.N.A. Act, prohibition of watered stock, adjustment of mountain freight rates, abolition of the Canadian senate, railway extension, conscription of wealth in time of war, amendment of pure food laws and the inauguration of a scheme of rural credits by the federal government.

Election of Officers took place during the forenoon of the second day; when Mr Aitken was re-elected president and Mr A. E. Peterson vice-Pres The convention was addressessed by Mr Norman Tucker on the live stock pool, and by Mr P. Ensenaur on the wheat pool, also by Mr J. R. Love on the dairy pool,

The speakers during the afternoon session were Hon R. G. Reid, H. E Spencer, M. P. and Wm Irvine M. P

In his address Mr Spencer dealt among other things, with the reasons leading up to the split in the progressive ranks during the past session, and the results which had followed. Mr Spencers stand on this occasion was very heartily endorsed by the convention, and he was accorded a vote of entire confidence.

HEALTH EDUCATION AND THE PEOPLE

How to be healthy and how to keep healthy is a problem that looms largely before every person in whose care is placed a family of children large or small. In the changed conditions of modern life parents have not always been successful in adjusting their homes to the new environments of today. At least that is what the doctors and health workers tell us and the people who ought to know. At the Annual Meeting of the American Medical Association Chicago Dr. C. W Nwell blames this "generation of Jazz for the increase in the prevalence of disease. Has the home as a health centre met the situation? The consensus of opinion seems to be that it has failed lamentably to do its duty by the coming generation. Dr Eminett Holt who was one of the foremost medical men at Columbia University where he was Professor of Children's Diseases in a pamphlet about the Health-Education of children which was written for the International Journal of Public Health gives two reason for the lamentable failure as he calls it of the Health gives two reasons for the lamentable failure as he calls it of the health teaching of the home. First the parents themselves, he says, are ignorant in regard to the matters that underlie healthy growth Secondly there is the complete breakdown of the discipline or authority of the home. Again, health teaching has been too abstract, the doctor thinks too theoretical and not linked up with practical life nor has it been made interesting. So much for the indictment of the medical man. In the face of such charges, in view of a declining birthrate and a high death-rate let us ask what is being done by organised effort to counteract the hectis pace of human life to-day?

One of the obligations placed upon the League of Red Cross Societies is the improvement of health and in its endeavours to fulfil that duty the Alberta Division of the Canadian Red Cross is seeking to dessiminate knowledge of health by every means available.

Classes for the study of Home-Nursing and Hygiene are bein formed up and down the province by the Health Nurse attached to the Head Office staff. Lectures on various phases of health have been given by lantern slides, moving pictures, and over the Radio. Literature on the Care of the Child, and Maternity welfare has been issued freely and in large quantities. Demonstrations and Health Exhibits have been held at Fairs in city and country. In the schools by means of health plays, posters and oters forms of activity health laws have been taught in attractive form to the children. That is one of the great reasons why the Red Cross goes on.

C.N.R. COLONIZATION DEPT. WILL LOCATE MEN

The Colonization and Development Department of the Canadian National Railways, having this year placed with Western farmers several thousands of immigrants for the season's work is now turning its attention to the matter of continued employment for these men during the coming winter.

Many, of course, are placed for a full year, and some will engage in bush work, but as some are engaged only until freeze-up, the Department would like to hear from farmers who can employ men for the winter months or for a full year, including the coming winter.

Application forms may be obtained from any C.N.R, Station Agent, or from Dan M. Johnston, Room 100 Union Depot, Winnipeg, or R.C.W. Lett, Corner 100th and Jasper Ss., Edmonton, Alta,

Those farmers who can do so should apply for a man as the satisfactory placing of these farm workers will be an important factor in Western development and settlement.

A little fore talk would save much after-talk.

Prominent Passengers on Empress of France

The tide of steamship traffic is turning westward again, and the St. Lawrence route is still the favoured one. Beside large numbers of immigrants and returning Canadians, a great many European tourists are now turning toward Canada and these form no small percentage of steamship passenger lists. Perhaps the most distinguished list this season, was carried by the Canadian Pacific S.S. Empress of France on her last westward voyage. Among those on board was Lord Beaverbrook, who with several members of his family will spend some time in this country. He was also accompanied by T. Marson Till, O.B.E., his secretary. Other prominent British passengers were Right Hon. Sir Evelyn Cecil, O.B.E.,P.C., M.P., and Col. Vaughan Morgan, O.B.E., M.P., of London. E. W. Bok, the famous Philadelphia publisher of Peace Prize fame also made the voyage.

Two passengers in whom much interest centered were Prince and Princess Serge Obolensky whose recent marriage in Paris was one of the big social events of the year. The Princess was formerly Miss Astor. The Hon. Charles A. Dunning, premier of Saskatchewan, was also on the France. Other prominent passengers included Mr. R. Bosch, the inventor of the Bosch Magneto, and Mrs. W. H. Taft, who was met at the dock by her husband, W. H. Taft of the U.S. Supreme Court and ex-President of the United States.

E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, returned on the Empress of France from a short visit to the Company's agencies in England and Scandinavia. He was much impressed by the great possibilities of a furtherance of trade between these countries and Canada.

Asked whether he had seen the Canadian papers while abroad, and had noted the storm of comment and protest that had followed upon the putting into effect of the Crow's Nest Pass rates, Mr. Beatty replied that he had seen a good deal of this, and it was nothing more than had been expected by himself and other railway officers.

"At the time the proposed restoration of the Crow's Nest rates was under discussion," he said "it was made abundantly evident by the railroads that they could not afford in the face of existing costs of operation for labor, materials, equipment, etc., to extend the operation of the Crow's Nest rates beyond the limits originally fixed. It was also fully explained that if restoration was forced upon the railways many inconsistencies would inevitably result, and some parts of the country would be unduly favored in comparison with others."

"One of the grave difficulties of the day in railway operation in Canada is that theorists in railroad management are preaching a doctrine that gives no thought to the cost of operation in relation to the price the railroad is permitted to get for the service it gives as a common carrier. In most other lines of business, cost to the consumer is based on the cost of production. I cannot see why it should be different in the selling of freight or passenger transportation. Somebody has got to pay wages and other operating costs, and if the shipper is not willing to do so, I do not know who will, unless the country will pay it as a whole and I imagine that even the strongest supporters of public ownership will agree that we have reached the limit in that direction.

"It is axiomatic, too, that the continuous betterments and improvements to existing railway lines and the provision of capital for extensions and new constructions generally depends directly upon the earning power of the companies, especially in the case of the Canadian Pacific, whose funds must be secured in the money markets of the world and it would be in every respect unwise to borrow unless the general earnings of the company were satisfactory. One of the difficulties facing the railway companies in Canada is that there is not a sufficient margin between revenues and outlays to permit of surpluses for working capital and for the general purposes of the companies. Until this margin is re-established extensive borrowings are highly undesirable. Nothing is more conducive to satisfactory commercial conditions than a healthy transportation situation and this can only be accomplished if a proper relation exists between revenues and disbursements.

"I should like to point out," said Mr. Beatty, "that the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of rates and charges on grain and grain products in the western United States very recently decided that the general basis of rates then in effect did not appear to be unreasonable and dismissed the application for reduction. Here it should be remembered that rates on grain and grain products now in effect in western Canada are not less than 25 per cent. lower than those in the United States. The Inter-state Commerce Commission is comprised of highly qualified economists who approach the technical and allied questions of railway rates and costs in a thoroughly scientific manner. On the other hand, the rate situation in Canada which has been the subject of so much comment recently has been brought about by the restoration by act of Parliament of a scale of rates fixed nearly thirty years ago without regard at all to present day costs of the inevitable disruption of the relationship which otherwise existed between various commodities and various producing centres."

Mr. Beatty added that figures had been filed with the Government showing the approximate decreases in revenue to both the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific railways by the adoption of the Crow's Nest rates on grain. These, he said, reflected a very serious loss of earning powers to the roads which would be made still more serious by the recent restoration of the rates on the balance of the commodities enumerated in that act.

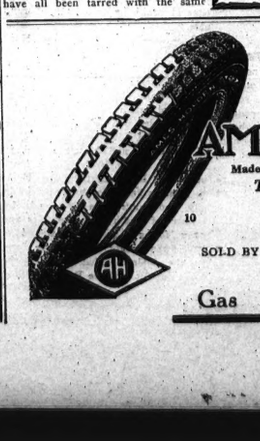

PREMIER KING SAYS NO ELECTION THIS YEAR

Premier Mackenzie King has announced that there will be no Dominion election this fall, thus setting at rest the hopes and fears of the politicians. Mr. Mackenzie has taken a sensible course in not going to the country at present. It is only fair to the tariff changes effected last session that they should have at least a year's trial. If the reductions already brought about prove to be, in the main, beneficial to the country at large, it will form a strong incentive to do some more reducing.

The Mackenzie King government is stronger today than at any time since the elections of 1921. Prior to the last session there was more ground for thinking that the government had no policy worth mentioning that it was more opportunist in its methods than all the other opportunist governments the country has ever had, (and they have all been tarred with the same brush). But the government displayed unexpected strength last session and if it continues along the same lines will deserve and receive the esteem of the electorate.

There is no call for an election this fall. Nobody wants one. The Premier's statement is accordingly well received by everyone.

The fall fat stock show and sale will be held in Calgary from November 4 to 7, according to a decision arrived at in a meeting of a committee from the Live Stock Association on Friday morning The show will include prizes for purebred cattle, sheep and swine a girls' and boys' lamb competition and a girls' and boys' pig feeding competition. There will also be a public auction of dairy cattle sheep and swine

The date of the spring horse and bill sale has not been set, but it is believed that this will be held durring the first week in April. One of the features of the show will be the girls' and boys' baby beef competition, in which F. Burns has again shown his great interest in the boys and girls and the stock, by his generous donation of prizes. Prizes will also be offered by the Dominion live stock branch for commercial cattle.

BANK BILLS PAPER RECLAIMED AND MADE OVER

What becomes of all the defaced and damaged paper money is a question that has often been asked of bankers Heretofore the answer has invariably been, that it is burned. Many interesting stories associated with the burning ceremony have gone the rounds of the press, among them being one in which an excessive draft in the furnace littered St. James street in Montreal with partially burned bills. Ottawa's fire department was once called out to answer an alarm of fire when damaged paper money was being destroyed in the furnace of the finance department in the East block Later the melting furnaces at he Mint were used for this purpose,

The destructon by burning of condemned paper money seems likely to become absolete practice. The forest products laboratories of the department of the interior, have been carrying on a series of experiments to develop the best method of recovering good paper stock from the condemned paper currency withdrawn from circulation by the department of finance and the various banks, and to ascertain if such a method is commercially feasible. Refining of the stock produced under normal cooking conditions was carried out and, by the use of a special washing equipment, it was found possible to recover an absolutely clean pulp.

The Wainwright Star

(Adapted From "The Yorkton Ent erprise")

Every meeting, whether of the public, or of a society, club, or association, should be advertised in the local paper.

By advertising the meeting, those interested have an opportunity of knowing about the affair beforehand, and can plan accordingly.

The chances of getting a good attendance at these functions are increased by newspaper advertising; because the paper carries the message to its readers, while other forms of advertising, such as posters, handbills, etc, require the reader to come to them, and they cost more,

Teas, Sales, Dances, Concerts, etc, can all be given publicity through the columns of the local paper.

Implements, Feed, Seed Grain, Stock, Houses for sale or rent, all these can be advertised cheaply and effectively through "The Star".

The advertisement will be read by everyone in a wide district, and the result from it will thereby be increased.

Advertising in the local news column is 10c per line per issue.

TEH MYSTERY FOREST

glass of wine; and when this offer had been declined he was asked to keep watch at the back of the bungalow whilst the girl slipped forth by the front door to take her seat in the car.

So he found himself, a minute later, outside in the windy darkness, on guard against he knew not what lurking peril, seeing nothing save the black mass of the forest, hearing nothing beyond the roaring gale and the crashing of storm-tossed trees. Patiently he waited, the cold night air falling altogether to dispel the heady effects of this strange adventure. His heart was flight, the blood surging as he remembered the feel of the girl's warm tremulous hand. But what a mystery it all was! How strange and wonderful if the pure white fire of his own sudden love had leapt the barriers and set her heart aflame.

A few large drops of rain splashed down from the driving clouds. He was just turning up his coat collar when the back door opened and he saw the mother beckoning.

"All is ready," she said. "Loh will see there is no light burning inside the car. I don't want you to turn on one. Nobody must see that you have a passenger."

"Who is there to see the car at all?" he asked, halting on the way through the central passage

The woman drew in her breath sharply.

"There are eyes in the forest tonight we know it! There are men—it is only fair to warn you—men who will endeavour to stop the car before you have gone far.

"The devil!" muttered Herriard. "Have you I wonder, any weapon I might borrow? I don't want to bungle this affair, you know.'

"I could give you a revolver, but you will be better without it. There will be no shooting that I am ready to swear! If it were not that we all have to avoid worldwide scandal, I might have sought aid from the police weeks ago. Drive on, whatever happens. Get your passenger out of the forest as quickly as possible. That is my entreaty—the prayer of a helpless mother who would give her own life cheerfully, for the safety of her unhappy child."

Herriard's answer was to pass out through the front porch, where the motor was waiting. The door of the car had been closed and the window drawn up, and all he could see by directing a swift glance through the dark, rain-splashed glass, was a vague form huddled in one corner. A veil was drawn about the face and hair, but he recognized the same brown scarf which the girl had worn indoors.

He took his seat at the wheel, turned the car towards the road, and uttered a cherry "Good night! to the mother standing in the porch.

"Good-bye!" she answered with such loudness that he wondered at the indiscretion. "Take care of your passenger until you are out of the forest."

"And then?" he asked:

"You will see," she said briefly, and stepped back into the passage. The door closed, bolts were shot; he was left to act on that one imperative order—to get his passenger out of the forest, and never mind the rest

At any rate it meant that he was free to choose his own route; and now as the car glided away, common sense prompted a return along the road by which he had come. There had been no obstruction that way he reflected; and then, even as the car swung to the right at the turning, he heard the faint ring of an axe, and the lamps showed him a larch tree in the very act of falling to block his path.

It was the proof that the peril had not been exaggerated.

With a slight quickening of the heart beat he backed the car and swung off to the left. But now another axe crashed home; only a few yards ahead of him he heard the rending crack of green lumber, a hoarse voice yelled to him to stop. He preferred to take his chance, and the car bounded past just in time, leafy bough brushing the back panels as the second tree fell—too late by a single moment.

Herriard had caught an involuntary cry of horror from someone evidently appalled by the narrow shave, and he laughed grimly as he sent the car booming on down the road. If bungling cowards were all he had to reckon with, there was going to be some fun

That cry, however, was followed quickly by a shout of warning, not for him this time, but for some sentinel yet to be reckoned with. The roar of a motor started up, and a moment later Herriard saw the dark shape of a car moving out from a sheltered clearing.

He realized the driver's intention either to block the roadway, or, failing in this, to give chase through the forest. Without a trace of fear, Herriard charged along, and there followed a moment full of sickening suspense whilst his car fought with the enemy's for a lead. They crashed together; it seemed as if their wheels must lock; and then Herriard was away, his engine going all out, whilst hard after him roared his pursuer.

Despite the excitement of that frantic tussle, when both cars had been in danger of piling themselves together in a mass of wreckage, there had come no cry from his passenger; but he was not surprised at her silence. She was made of fine stuff, this lovely veiled girl, who was now the prize he had got to wrest from his opponent in the race.

One battered headlamp on Herriard's car squinted uselessly at the trees rushing past on the left side of the track, but the other cast its broad ray in front as faithfully as ever and he held on at the mad pace, with the whole car bounding in out of ruts and splashing through pools of water. Drive! He would drive through hell itself to bear his passenger into safety They were no all bunglers, it seemed for the man in the pursuing car was following on with just the same reckless contempt for life. And suddenly, to emphasize his desperate meaning here came the bang of a revolver-shot and bullet struck Herriard's car.

The grim smile vanished from his strained face. This was the one peril from which he had been assured he was immune—the other had been prepared to swear it.

Had she, after all under-estimated the length to which the enemy would go? The answer came in another shot that dispelled the unpleasant doubt whilst it awakened other fears, for that second shot was followed by the bursting of a tire.

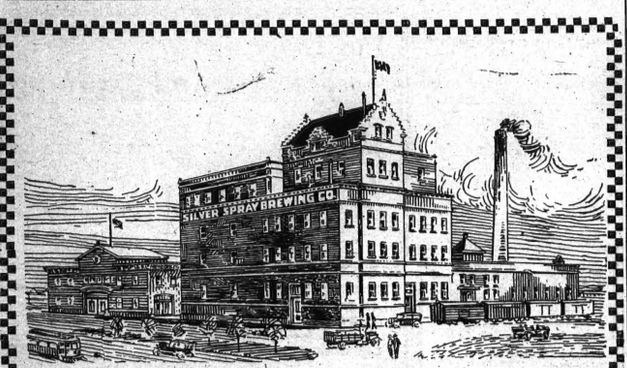

His presence of mind saved the car from wrecking itself against the trees his nerve and skill kept it blundering on; but he knew that the race must finish soon. And what then

Quite calmly he had begun to settle just how he would act in this new crisis, when there was a sound from the rear that made his heart leap joyfully —the awful, slithering crash of an overturning car, and then complete silence.

Herriad's fine instincts filled him with hesitation now. The enemy had come to grief badly, and common humanity seemed to demand a halt for inquiries. But no; there was the order to drive on, whatever happened, and nothing must hinder its execution. The man would have to wait for help from other quarters—if any help could save him.

Gamely the wounded car struggled along, so that Herriard called down

DRY GOODS, BOOT & SHOES,
MEN'S & BOYS' FURNISHINGS
LADIES' READY TO WEAR

Now is the Time to get Girls and Boys ready to go back to school.

For Mothers who are skilled at home sewing, you will find splendid materials at reasonable prices at this store. We quote this week an ALL-WOOL Navy Blue Serge, 36-inche width, splendid value at 68¢ or if your choice lies in Flannel or Wool Delaine we have these in some very pretty designs
We have also a number of Gingham Dresses made up in 10 and 12 year-old sizes that we are clearing out at, each $1.75 to $3.00

For boys we have a number of suits in 7, 8, 10 and 12-year-old sizes which we will clear at, per suit $5.00, $6.00, & $7.50
Better hurry if you want any of these. They're sure to go!

If the party who left the cap on the counter a short time ago will call, he can get it. No storage charged.

Flannelette For Friday & Saturday

A good medium grade of striped flannelette, 27-inches wide, for Friday and Saturday selling 10 yds for $2.00
A little heavier grade, 30-inch, going at 10 yds for $2.25

Every Girl and Boy will want good comfortable Leather Shoes to start school with; we have them from Sandals to High-laced Shoes at reasonable prices.
